

The Promise and Perils of Prediction: Professionalism, Ethics and Medical Regulation

Guest Speaker: Associate Professor Eleanor Milligan, School of Medicine, Griffith University

Eleanor Milligan is the Academic Lead in Law, Ethics and Professional Practice in the MBBS at Griffith University. Eleanor completed her doctorate in medical ethics at QUT in 2007, following completion of a Bachelor of Arts (First Class Honours), Bachelor of Science (Microbiology/Biochemistry), and Graduate Diploma in Education. She worked in industry and education prior to establishing the Princess Alexandra Clinical Ethics Service in 2008 and continues to work as a Clinical Ethicist for Queensland Health.

She holds a number of other professional roles including:
Member of the National Health and Medical Research Council's Australian Health Ethics Committee;
Member of Medical Board of Australia (Queensland); Member of the Australian Medical Council and Public Assessor QCAT.

Eleanor will consider the complex environment of medical regulation, the promise, the peril and the ethics of prediction in medical regulation and what this means for medical regulators, clinicians, legal representatives, and members of the public.

Prediction
is a fraught 'science'.
Hindsight bias is ever present,
and there is a lack of robust data and research in the regulatory space. Public and political investment in the outcomes is high, and the deeply emotive nature of health and illness can further muddy the waters of clear and fair decision making.
